OSTEOPATHIC ASSOCIATION

Meeting the Challenge

As we endeavor to provide the best possible care at the lowest possible cost for our patients, new challenges continue to arise. Providing healthcare seems to be like compressing jello; every time we address one problem another pops up, often more complicated and expensive to resolve. This past year, opioid addiction has emerged and our reimbursement models are still evolving. Making things even more difficult, the direction from Washington remains in flux and expectations for our time and effort continue to increase. At Beaumont Health, we are most fortunate to have exceptionally dedicated colleagues, no better evidenced than by those who are volunteering their time to present a diverse educational symposium designed to help us succeed amidst the tumult. While the information provided often enables us to better serve our patients, so does strengthening personal relationships. Meeting each other as people/families in a setting far away from our daily professional activities often strengthens the foundation of trust necessary to stimulate innovative solutions. One additional benefit that must be mentioned is the joy of seeing the smiles and hearing the laughter of the children as they make new friends and participate in a wide variety of events. These opportunities have been much appreciated by attendees over the past 20 years, whether resulting in delivering better care, establishing new referral relationships or working together to solve difficult problems after returning to the workplace. We thank our volunteer faculty and encourage all to avail themselves of this unique opportunity, resolute in our determination to help everyone meet the challenge, whatever it may be.
