- practical strategies to address symptomatic patients in the era of access to medical and recreational marijuana
- recognizing cultural and religious factors that influence health care delivery in the Jewish patient population
- addressing unique care needs of veterans and accessing resources through the Veterans Administration
- ethical and practical considerations in high-risk perinatal situations and in addressing hydration and nutrition at end of life

TARGET AUDIENCE

Beaumont primary care and specialty physicians, NPs, PAs, fellows, residents, students, nurses, social workers, administrators and spiritual care professionals.

OBJECTIVES

- Identify ethical issues in perinatal medicine and available resources for palliative care when a child is not expected to survive long post-delivery.
- Recognize cultural attributes that inform medical decision-making, health care preferences and advance care planning in the Jewish patient population.
- Describe the mechanism of action for pain control associated with “medical marijuana” and issues that may arise in patients also seeking traditional pain management strategies.
- Identify ethical principles related to artificial hydration and nutrition at end of life, and “Voluntary Cessation of Eating and Drinking” in serious and terminal illness.
